THE object of this compilation is simply to invite the attention of American Numismatists to a class of Medals that has hitherto been greatly neglected ; a class that is inferior to none in variety and interest, and that has a more immediate bearing on the history of our country than any other.

It may possibly cause some surprise that the medals and tokens relating to the first President should not be included in this series, but several reasons exist that I have thought were sufficient to warrant their exclusion. Most Collectors have made the formation of a Washington Series a separate object of pursuit, and have fixed a standard of valuation differing from that possessed by the pieces I have enumerated. James Ross Snowden, Esq., late director of the United States Mint, has lately published a very complete and admirable work on this series, and those collectors who prefer to commence their Presidential series with the Washington pieces, may, if they please, consider this little work merely a supplement or addendum to that of Mr. Snowden. If no other consideration existed, the extent alone of the Washington Series might suffice to separate the two departments, as it consists of a greater number of distinct pieces than the three hundred and sixty mentioned in this volume.

In arranging the medals forming the series, I have adopted the plan of including all pieces bearing the effigy or name of any President since Washington, and of any candidate for that office—excluding the pieces technically known as “mules,” and also excluding those whose peculiarities are merely a variation in the milling of the edge, or in the size and thickness of the planchet on which the medal is struck.

I would acknowledge my indebtedness to several collectors, and especially to Mr. Hewitt, for valuable assistance in obtaining material for the catalogue.

Any collector who may be the possessor of varieties not mentioned, will confer a great favor by enclosing a minute description or pencil-rubbing, and addressing Box 270, Brooklyn, N. Y.

NOTES.

JOHN ADAMS.

No. 1. The dies of this medal were never hardened, and the piece exists only in soft metal. It belongs to the series of "Peace Medals" authorised by Congress, and struck at the U. S. Mint, for distribution among the Indian tribes. With few exceptions, the medals of each administration were made of three different sizes, and a portion were struck in silver. In October, 1861, a number were re-struck in bronze, from the original dies, and may now be obtained by application to the Director of the U. S. Mint, at prices varying from $2 to $2.50.

2 and 3. Published by Geo. H. Lovett, New York, in 1830, at 50 cents in copper and 25 cents in white metal.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

4 See note on No. 1.

5. Described in the Collections of the Mass. Hist. Soc. Third Series.

6 and 7. See note on No. 2.

JAMES MADISON.

8. See note on No. 2. Whitmore, Nov. 2, 1859, Silver, $10.50.

9 Struck recently, from the original dies cut by Furst. The legend on the reverse should read "Industry brings Plenty."

10 and 11. See note on No. 2.

JAMES MONROE.

12. See note on No. 1.

13 and 14. See note on No. 2.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

15 See note on No. 1.

16 Excessively rare; one of the earliest "Campaign Medals," and a mate to No 21. An omission occurs in the text; the inscription on the reverse should read "His Excellency, John Quincy Adams," &c.

17 and 18. See note on No. 2.

ANDREW JACKSON.

19. See note on No. 1.

20. Authorized by the U. S. Congress, Cogan, May, 1860, $4.25; Wildey, April 29, 1861, $2.38. Re-struck and for sale by the U. S. Mint, 1861, $2.00.
